MR. RICHMAN: Can you specify which document you're talking about? Are you talking about the exhibits or the first page? MR. MILLER: I'm talking about the entirety of the document, the notice and the attachments to the notice, which are the schedules. A It reads that way, yes.	ARBITRATION - VOLUME III A I would think so. Q Do you have any reason to believe otherwise? A No. Q Let's turn your attention to the second page of this document which is Exhibit 1 entitled Alternative Schedule. And how does Paragraph 2 of this Alternative Schedule describe the employe contributions that would take effect under this Alternative Schedule? A It basically says that the 8 percent allocation would become 11.8 percent. Q And it says "11.8 percent of wages"? A Yes. Q It does not mention anything about shifts, correct? A No. Q Or about pay rates per shift?

ARBITRATION - VOLUME III And, again, that's Exhibit 56. And Ms. Egan, this document staples together several letters, so let me just ask you to draw your attention to the second page of this document which has the stamp at the bottom NYT-001963. A 1963, okay. Q Do you see that at the bottom. Why don't you take a moment and take a look at that letter. A Okay. Q So this appears to be another request by The New York Times for an estimate of withdrawal liability including CBU information which is requested in Paragraph 2. A Okay. Q And are you familiar with this	ARBITRATION - VOLUME III we did a couple of them but I thought it was later. Q And I take it that if a request strike that. If we could find it. Q I'm sorry. Now I need you to turn your attention back to the white binder and Exhibit 4. This should be a letter dated August 15, 2011, again to the Fund, from a man named James Dexter. Do you recall seeing this letter? A They all look alike after a while.
letter? A No. Q Do you recall having prepared an estimate of The New York Times' withdrawal liability in response to this letter? A I don't recall preparing. I know	I don't remember. I don't remember if I've seen this letter. Q Now sticking with this white binder, why don't you just go ahead and move to Exhibit 18. A Okay.
ARBITRATION - VOLUME III Q Exhibit 18 is a memorandum from you and Mr. Urbank to the Fund director of the NMDU Fund, Mr. Schwartz, dated June 25, 2012, correct? A Yes. Q And attached to this letter is an estimate of withdrawal liability for The New York Times for withdrawal in the year ended May 31, 2012, correct? A Yes. Q Did you prepare the report that is attached to the memorandum? A Yes. Q And if you turn your attention to Page 15 of the report, which has a label entitled SEGAL-000032, you'll see there is a payment schedule that you calculated in connection with this estimate of withdrawal liability. Do you see that? A Yes. Q And you calculated a payment of roughly 952,000 per quarter in connection with this withdrawal liability estimate,	ARBITRATION - VOLUME III correct? A Yes. Q And now I'd like to draw your attention to the next page, Page 16. And what I'd like to do is explore with you how you came up with that quarterly payment amount of roughly $952,000. A Sorry? Q So I'd like to explore with you how you calculated that number. A Oh, okay. Okay. Q So under the heading Contribution Rates, you'll see that there are a variety of percentages that are listed. And then under the heading Effective Date, it indicates roughly a ten-year period from July 1, '99 through January 1, 2009, correct? A Yes. Q And the highest contribution rate listed there is 8 percent, correct? A Eight percent of wage. Q And then under the column Total Wages for The New York Times, there are

A I would use the Segal blend and that's my best estimate. Q That's not the question I asked. The question I asked is: You, personally, as the actuary for this Fund do not think it is appropriate to use purely a commercial market annuity rate to calculate withdrawal liability? A I, personally, would not use it. Q And in your judgment it's not appropriate, correct? Yes or no? A Whether another actuary finds it reasonable ARBITRATOR IRVINGS: The question is what do you find it? A There are many ways that it could be done. I don't think it's unreasonable to use funding. I don't think it's unreasonable to use one rate, but I wouldn't

This memo is a memo from senior people at the Segal Company in which the Segal Company recognizes, having developed the so-called Segal blend, that the Supreme Court decision in Concrete Pipe, as they concede, raises a serious question whether continued use of the Segal blend is permissible.

That's what they say in the very first paragraph.

In the second paragraph and throughout the remainder of the memo, they state these issues about continued use of the Segal blend must be brought to Page 611

ARBITRATION - VOLUME III the attention of clients who might be affected.

And the clear implication of the memo and its attachments is that the very actuarial consulting firm that developed this approach recognized that the Supreme Court decision could -- and we submit does -- render that approach illegal. And they wanted to take steps, as set forth in the memo when you read it in its entirety, to protect themselves from potential professional liability in the event it continued to be used and was eventually found to be illegal.

So the fact that the very consulting firm that developed this approach found the Supreme Court decision, which we're relying upon, as raising a serious issue of the continued legal permissibility is, I would submit, not merely relevant but highly relevant and should be given appropriate weight by you in your decision here.

MR. RICHMAN: Okay. Whether

ARBITRATION - VOLUME III the Segal method is illegal under Concrete Pipe is a legal question.

The fact that the Segal Company issued a memo saying it raised -- and it actually says, "The US Supreme Court decision raises the question whether that is permissible" -- is -- has no weight whatsoever in anyone, whether it's yourself or a court, deciding whether Concrete Pipe determined that the Segal blend is impermissible."

This is a legal question.

ARBITRATOR IRVINGS: I'll get to you, too. Don't worry.

(Laughter.)

MR. RICHMAN: I could see him out of my left eye. I didn't know if he was going to jump on the table.

And are we seriously going forward with the argument here that because the Segal Company raised the issue and asked its actuaries to do certain things with respect to their clients, that somehow that lends a support for a legal

ARBITRATION - VOLUME III determination as to whether what Concrete Pipe decided?

The fact of the matter is, as we know, Courts subsequent to Concrete Pipe don't interpret Concrete Pipe the way that The Times interprets it. In fact, the Seventh Circuit, Judge Posner, specifically endorses the use of the Segal method.

The other thing is that we're now going to go down the road and the reality is the Segal method (sic.) hasn't retreated from the use of the Segal method.

And we already had testimony from this witness about how she uses it for all of her plans from beginning to end.

And so I really don't understand why we're going to go on this detour. It has no relevance.

MR. MILLER: Mr. Richman suggested that there was no link between this memo and the factual record.

A We knew that the allocation of the wage rate was 6 percent, 6 and a half percent, 7 percent, and 8 percent. So what we did was we took the contribution to estimate a payment, we took the contribution information and divided it by that allocation to get to simulate kind of a wage, and trying to piece those pieces together come up with what could be an estimate of a payment, an annual payment. Q And what did you do to piece those pieces together? A We multiplied the highest in one category by the highest average in the other category to get a similar number that you would get to an annual payment. Q Okay.

ARBITRATION - VOLUME III Q So you mentioned the phrase " estimate range" required as described ARBITRATION - VOLUME III used was a blended rate by the actuary, 7 and a half percent for some of the liabilities, 5.50/5.02 percent depending on duration for others of the liabilities.

I estimated that that assumption even independently would have fallen within the best estimate range required as described in the actuarial literature, actuarial standards of practice and the guidance given by the American Academy of Actuaries Pension Council on selection of economic interest rates and that the assumption was in the best estimate range.

I did more analysis and looked at what current interest rates were at that time, market interest rates.

And depending where in the risk spectrum one were going to look at the interest rates ranging from Treasuries to corporates, there was somewhere between 3 and a half to 7 percent, but more in the middle of that range would have been an interest rate based on relatively risk-free bonds or financial instruments.

Q So you mentioned the phrase "best estimate range" required as described in the actuarial literature, actuarial standards of practice and the guidance given by the American Academy of Actuaries Pension Council.

So let's see if we could take these one by one and tell us, if you could tell us, what is the best estimate range required as described in, first, generally, actuarial literature?

A Well, we would start with Actuarial Standard of Practice 27. I believe it's one of the documents, if we could tell me which number.

Q Ten.

A Ten.

On Page 2, Section 2.1, best estimate range is defined for each economic assumption. "The narrowest range within which the actuary recently anticipates that the actual results compounded over the measurement period are more likely than not to fall."

ARBITRATION - VOLUME III

So it's the narrowest range over the measurement period where you have 50 percent of the results falling when you do some type of stochastic modeling.

And then the practice note issued by the Pension Practice Council of the American Academy of Actuaries actually went through a derivation explaining to the actuaries how this could actually be calculated.

And generally --

Q Go ahead.

A And, generally, it's between the 25th and 75th percentiles of the distribution stochastic model.

Q And did you participate in that practice note?

A Yes. My name is actually on the practice note. I was on the Pension Practice Council at the time. I don't recall if I was vice-chair or just a member.

Q When you say in general it's between the 25th and 75th percentile, can you explain what that means?

ARBITRATION - VOLUME III

A The fund has different types of investments. They may have some international equity, domestic large cap, domestic small cap, value funds, growth funds, real estate, money market funds, short-term bond funds, long-term bond funds, international, high risk, all different types of investment classes. Every investment class.

Economists or market specialists based on various models would be able to determine the expected return, the geometric mean of return over a period of time. Most actuaries would use something like 30 years as the measurement period for the model, some may use 20.

And then you have a standard deviation, and that gives a range of results.

And then there are correlations of return between the different asset classes so that when some asset classes go up, others will generally go down. Others will go in sync.

So a model will have the correlations, the geometric means as well as the standard deviations for the different asset classes and, whether it does it using mathematic formulas or stochastic model, will then model out the range of scenarios that can ensue and rank them from bottom to

And then you get percentiles. You find where the 5th percentile is where they're 5 percent below and 95 percent above, and that's the 5th percentile.

The 25th percentile is where 25 percent are below and 75 percent are above.

And the best estimate range is -in the practice note is generally going to be the 25th to 75th percentiles of that range of possible outcomes for the particular asset mix.

- O Okay. Can you just tell us what a stochastic model is?
- Stochastic model is something where it's equivalent of running a thousand or ten

ARBITRATION - VOLUME III thousand scenarios, where you're effectively rolling the dice or taking a random number generated as CBUR (ph.) from the spectrum for each individual outcome such as for the bonds or for the CPI or for the

And then you get one scenario, one model running out for the 30 years. And then you redo it again on another scenario, and you run all the different scenarios and get the results over a 30-year period, what the compound effect of return is in each one of those scenarios, and then you rank them.

And that's the output of a stochastic model. Sometimes they're called Monte Carlo models.

It's a way of looking at the data to see what is the range of possible outcomes.

Other times people will do it using the mathematic formulas that could be derived from the different inputs to actually just get it out exactly mathematically.

ARBITRATION - VOLUME III

There are three different approaches.

And, well, I'll tell you what. Let's go to the mortality assumption.

You took a look at that.

- Α Yes. Page 13.
- Okay. And what was your -- without going through your whole report, what was the conclusion you reached?

The conclusion I had was that for the May 31, 2009 liabilities, they were pretty close. There were two assumptions, two aspects of the assumption that were off but they were somewhat offsetting.

One is it did not reflect the blue-collar nature of the workers which would give us anticipated higher mortality and did not reflect mortality improvements from 2000 to 2009, nor any expected mortality improvements from 2009 to actual experience over the ensuing lifetimes of these individuals.

And the two factors of not projecting the mortalities improvements and ARBITRATION - VOLUME III not reflecting the blue collar, I thought it would be pretty close to offsetting each other. So the Mortality Table was pretty close to spot on.

- Okay. And what about the spouse Q age?
- Spouse age was right in the middle of the age where actuaries have the assumption. Absent data of the individuals in this plan, I would say it's a very reasonable assumption.
 - 0 And what about percent married?
- Α Percent married, I believe the actuary understated the percentage married within the population. Under normal circumstances, that would slightly understate the liabilities.

Because this plan has a death benefit with respect to nonmarried individuals, the amount of understatement becomes much smaller, but there is a small understatement of liability.

Okay. And the other demographic assumptions?

ARBITRATION - VOLUME III

A When I looked at the history of the demographic experience in the valuation reports over a nine-year period, I had to exclude two of those reports because of extraordinary events that occurred during the year.

There were demographic items such as a major shutdown which led to a turnover of population, people terminating employment that would not be in the norm over time.

And the other was a death audit where they went through and actually checked to make sure that all the retirees were alive and nobody was cashing checks. So it's a death audit.

And they found a fair number of people who were dead that they did not know they were dead, and as a result the liabilities went down. So that's a nonrecurring event that the actuary could not anticipate.

So excluding those two years and looking at the other seven years, the actuarial demographic experience was very

ARBITRATION - VOLUME III close to a wash, which would mean that the assumptions in the aggregate for demographics were pretty close to spot on, with one exception. There was no allowance for mortality improvements from the date of the valuation to the expected for the rest of the life expectancy of the participants.

So to that extent, there was a few percent understatement of plan liabilities.

Q Okay.

Did you reach a conclusion as to whether the actuarial assumptions in the aggregate used by the Segal Company to calculate The New York Times' withdrawal liability were reasonable?

- A I believe they were reasonable in the aggregate.
- Q Now, Mr. French testified that the Segal blend method is unreasonable because it does not use a fund's investment return assumption to calculate withdrawal liability.

Do you recall that?

A Yes.

Page 696

Q And it's also in his Exhibit 9 -not his Exhibit 9, in Exhibit 9 which is his report.

ARBITRATION - VOLUME III

Do you agree with his opinion?

A No.

O Why not?

A There's no requirement that the two assumptions be the same.

O And let's take a look at ASOP 27.

A Which is Exhibit 10?

Q Yes.

And can you tell us in looking at the ASOP 27 why it is your opinion that the investment assumption and the interest assumption for calculating withdrawal liability don't need to be the same?

A Well, first of all, ASOP 27 has a Section 3.3, General Considerations.

"The actuary should consider the following folks when identifying which types of economic assumptions to use for a specific measurement and when selecting those economic assumptions that will be used, A, the purpose and nature of the ARBITRATION - VOLUME III measurement."

So if you have two measurements of the same cash flow stream which have different purposes and different natures, perforce you may have different assumptions.

O Okav.

And how does that apply to the issue of using an interest assumption that's different than the investment return assumption for calculating withdrawal liability?

A When you have withdrawal liability, the withdrawing employer is given a final number with no risk.

If the investments underperform, you cannot go back to that withdrawing employer with another bill.

If the investment is outperforming, the withdrawing employer gets no credit.

But it is a final settlement of an obligation to provide for certain benefits.

In an ongoing plan, all of the ongoing employers share in the upside, share in the downside.

To the extent that you took any other investment portfolio and looked to do the following: I'm going to invest in whatever the Fund is investing in, but I want to buy insurance that covers all of the downside below 5 and a half percent. What would it cost me? If I were to sell to somebody else all of the upside above 5 and a half percent from this portfolio, the two numbers would exactly balance each other out because that's the marketplace for valuing risk,

So the marketplace price for insuring the 5 and a half percent, given how I'm investing, the market would charge me a price for giving up all of the upside 5 and a half percent, one hundred percent of the upside.

ARBITRATION - VOLUME III

So is it your testimony that the market would take all of the upside and charge you a price in addition to that?

A The market would charge me all of the upside, and that would equal what I have to pay for all of the downside protection.

The two absent frictional costs, brokerage commissions, things like that, the buy/sell spreads, the two would cancel each other out assuming the 5 and a half were the correct marketplace interest rate.

Q And 5 and a half marketplace interest rate for?

A PBGC is indicating that that's the marketplace interest rate for these liabilities at that date.

Q What about a 7 and a half percent assumption?

A If I wanted to buy insurance against everything below 7 and a half and give up everything above 7 and a half, I would give up everything above 7 and a half. And I would have to pay incrementally out of my pocket the difference between the present

ARBITRATION - VOLUME III value of the cash flow stream at 7 and a half and the cash flow stream at 5 and a half.

All of that difference in present value would be the price I would have to pay in addition to the upside above 7 and a half to insure everything below 5 and a half.

I'm sorry. Back up.

To insure everything below 7 and a half, I would have to give up all the upside plus pay for the difference between 5 and a half and 7 and a half. That's what would it cost me to insure the 7 and a half.

So I would have to pay, give up all the upside and pay money to guarantee the 7 and a half. So I couldn't buy 7 and a half in the marketplace with no cost.

Q What is a Bader Swap?

A Bader Swap was popularized in literature by Larry Bader, a well-known actuary who spent nine years at Salomon Brothers under Marty Leibowitz, under Henry Kaufman writing research papers.

Marty Leibowitz went over

ARBITRATION - VOLUME III to Tiaa-CREF, and Henry Kaufman was the one who called the market switch in 1982.

If I offered to give you a -- if I offer you a 20-year deal, I will give you one hundred percent of return on the S&P 500 on a million dollars.

In return, you are going to give me one hundred percent of return on one month's Treasuries for 20 years on a million dollars.

But, remember, on the S&P that I'm paying you, the market goes down, you gotta pay me.

So you are getting the full return on the S&P 500, good or bad, for 20 years.

The expectation is, let's for argument sake the S&P's expected to earn 8 percent over the next 20 years. And one month Treasuries, for argument's sake, are not going to be low like they are now but will be 3 percent for the next 20 years.

And, further, to make sure this is a good transaction, we each have humongous banks behind us guaranteeing that we'll make

Page 710 Page 711 1 ARBITRATION - VOLUME III 1 ARBITRATION - VOLUME III 2 2 Why? If I'm going to give you the S&P 500, good on our commitments so it's not a 3 3 I'll buy a million dollars' worth of promise that won't be kept. 4 4 So your expectation is you're going S&P 500. Whatever returns I give you, you 5 5 to make $50,000 a year, the difference are going to give me one month's Treasuries. 6 6 between 8 percent and 3 percent, over a I sell one month's Treasuries short 7 7 for a million dollars, and whatever you give 20-year period on this million-dollar 8 8 me I pay the short. Where do I get the investment. 9 9 If I offered to enter into this money to buy the million dollars for the 10 10 S&P? From what I get by selling the transaction with you, what would you offer 11 11 to pay me? Because this transaction is Treasuries short. 12 12 called the Bader Swap. I will give you the So I'm at no cash Day One. I'm 13 13 return on one investment, you'll give me the long S&P, short Treasuries because you are 14 14 return on another investment. And it's a going to pay me to cover the short in the 15 15 Treasuries. I'll pay you to cover the long 20-year deal, we can't get out of it. 16 16 on the S&P. Most people would say, oh, I'm 17 17 Every time that we have to settle going to make $50,000 expected a year for 18 18 up, whatever you pay me for the Treasuries, the next 20 years, I should pay something 19 19 I give to the short market. Whatever I have for it. Maybe not the million dollars. 20 20 to pay you on the S&P, I collect from the Discount it, maybe some discount for risk 21 21 contract I bought. whatever, but they'll pay me something. 22 22 So I'm just the middleman shuffling The answer is if you are willing to 23 23 money between you and the marketplace. I pay me one dollar, you have overpaid because 24 24 can actually put this on autopilot and walk anything you pay me is pure profit, and I 25 25 away. ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV (Whereupon, the following proceedings were had:) MR. MILLER: I want to begin today's hearing by making a statement and a motion as a result of The Times finally receiving certain trustee minutes over the weekend. In our recent briefing respecting Rosana Egan's testimony, The Times expressed a concern that it was likely that the minutes supportive of The Times' position in this case had not previously been produced. And what we have now learned is that this concern is quite warranted. There are a number of separate set of minutes that are very supportive of The Times' position. And supportive of The Times' position, Mr. Arbitrator, on both of the issues in this case, the contract issue and the Segal blend issue. And not only would we have put these documents in evidence, quoted from them in our opening brief, but more	ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV importantly, we would have deposed a number of witnesses about these documents including potentially witnesses who have not testified. And we would then have used these documents in eliciting their hearing testimony. And all of these relevant documents were responsive to our prior discovery requests and should have been produced back in the fall and prior to the deposition schedule. Here's what we've also learned. We also learned that there are a number of additional documents that clearly exist. And the Fund has custody of specifically exhibits to the trustee minutes and trustee meeting agenda memos that are also potentially relevant and potentially helpful to The New York Times, and they have not yet been produced. And, finally, we learned from the meeting minutes that we do have that there were other special meetings of the trustees for which the Fund has not

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV Improvement Plan.

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV produced minutes as well as other possible meetings involving trustees that didn't rise to the level of a formal or special meeting.

And we need to have a thorough search done for these special meeting minutes and an opportunity to depose people about special meetings and other meetings and potentially have them testify

I thought it would be helpful in demonstrating how probative these meeting minutes that we did receive are and helpful to The Times in its case if I went quickly through two examples. And I have a binder of the meeting minutes.

The first one I want to go through is under Tab 21, which are the minutes of a special meeting of April 18, 2011.

Mr. Arbitrator, if you look at the first page of that set of meeting minutes under the discussion of Funding Improvement Plan, and as you know there have been testimony about the Funding

Under the first paragraph under that heading, there's reference to a Segal report that was discussed at this trustee meeting, and a copy of the Segal report is appended to these meeting minutes as Exhibit A. And we have not yet received that Exhibit A Segal report nor have we received any of the exhibits that were indeed attached to any of these sets of meeting minutes.

The more probative element of this set of meeting minutes is on the second page. And it would be useful I think if you turn to that page and focus on the bottom paragraph. There is a paragraph that begins "The Segal representatives and review ..."

And so this purports to be a discussion at this meeting by Segal of potential contributions that would be necessary in developing a Funding Improvement Plan.

And toward the bottom of that

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV

paragraph, there is a sentence that begins "Under the scenario ..." And it says, "Under the scenario that took into account the adoption of this special funding relief measures, the default schedule would increase the employer contribution rate at the time of collective bargaining from 8 percent to 12.4 percent."

And later on it also makes mention of employer contribution rate, not rates, plural. And it refers to the rate as a percentage.

That's our theory. I mean, our theory is that the contribution rate under the bargaining agreement is expressed as a percentage. And if the contribution rate is expressed as a percentage and CBUs are necessarily because they have to be expressed in dollars and wages.

So this is a very probative document and very helpful to The Times' case, and as trustees meeting minutes it ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV ties the trustees to the concept of a contribution rate as a percentage.

And because we didn't have this document until this past weekend, we couldn't use it to support Terry Hayes' testimony on what constituted CBUs and what he learned at trustee meetings.

And we couldn't use it in the depositions of Rosana Egan and John Urbank on the issue of CBUs, and we couldn't use it in refuting Rosana Egan's testimony when she testified.

And, indeed, I think this documentary evidence does directly contradict her testimony that those people at the Fund always understood that the contribution rate was a percentage of the shift wage.

This document refutes that and we couldn't use it

We also couldn't use it to refresh the trustees' recollection of what happened at trustee meetings regarding what the contribution was.

The second of the two examples I would like to show you is at Tab 25.

Those are meeting minutes almost two years later in February of 2013, February 27, 2013, and you'll see under the first paragraph it says "Call to order." And, again, there is a mention of a Segal handout on funding plan projections, again attached and made part of the minutes of Exhibit A.

And as I said, we haven't receive any of those exhibits.

And if you turn to the third page, you'll see toward the bottom of the page, again there is a discussion of the Funding Improvement Plan and different objectives in order to develop it.

And under the Paragraphs 1, 2 and 3 there's reference to changing the contribution rate from 8 percent of what, of wages, to 11.8 percent of wages.

And, in fact, without belaboring it, this document on more than ten different occasions within the document

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV refers to the contribution as a percentage of wages.

And, again, it ties use of the phrase "percent of wages" to the trustees since these were their minutes.

And my point here is not that there are arguments to be made about the implication of this, but that we didn't have a chance to use it in depositions and then at the hearing both, as I say, for our witnesses as well as in cross.

And you should be aware that the meeting minutes also speak of the 7.5 percent return and projections of 7.5 percent return for this particular portfolio for a number of years. And that the trustees at times also in the last several years started out changing the investment allocation mix and decided not to do that.

That's also helpful for The Times. It's also consistent with our views on the Segal blend. We couldn't use it to refute Rosana Egan on the Segal blend.

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV

So these are very helpful minutes that we had a right to and we have not been able to use thus far in the case.

There are additional documents that we glean as a consequence of these minutes that we know are in the possession of the Fund that we have not received

I made mention of special meetings. In these minutes they make mention of some special meetings, and we don't have minutes of all of the special meetings.

And there are at least four separate special meetings referred to in the minutes we do have that we have not yet received minutes in connection with.

And if the Fund doesn't have them in the Fund office, perhaps their agents did, their counsel, former trustees. We need to see these documents. We have a right to these documents.

So we think we've been highly prejudiced by this failure to get these documents. And we think that these documents were clearly responsive to our production requests that we made back in the summer.

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV

So at this juncture, we think we cannot eliminate the prejudice, but for the reasons that I discussed and the importance of these documents, we should not be required to just press ahead.

So, instead, as a consequence of all this, The Times would like to and hereby does make the following motion to hopefully at least mitigate the prejudice.

So, first, we would move for an order requiring the Fund, Mr. Arbitrator, to produce all of the exhibits to the minutes that we have received, the agenda memos. I made mention that there were apparently written agenda memos that were provided at each of the trustee minutes. We'd like all of the agenda memos that were prepared for each trustee meeting and all other documents referred to in the minutes.

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV

2.4

And we'd like the order to require the Fund to inquire of all of its agents for minutes relating to special meetings that we have not yet received or other meetings involving trustees where minutes or notes were kept.

Second, following receipt of these documents -- and we don't think it would take that long to pull them together, 10 days, 14 days, tops -- we'd like an order allowing us a three- to four-week period to depose or redepose witnesses. We don't want to have to confront these witnesses with documents at a hearing without have a sense of what would be said about them.

To be sure, the depositions will be limited to questions regarding trustee minutes and trustee minutes only and the exhibits and the other documents that we would be provided.

And, third, following sort of the close of this mini additional deposition period, we would like the opportunity to

Page 761

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV then identify the witnesses we'd like to put back on the stand, like a Terry Hayes or Rosana Egan or additional witnesses, potentially trustees, other trustees.

And then we'd schedule additional hearing days, and that would also include Ms. Albergo, presumably in May or perhaps June after this short period to take depositions.

And, fourth and finally, we'd like the order to require the Fund to pay The Times' costs and fees for this additional discovery and hearing testimony.

And in that final regard and as to this last request, we would like the opportunity to brief the issues so that we can provide to you, Mr. Arbitrator, what we think would be useful precedent to demonstrate that under that fact scenario we have here there is clear support and a good foundation for the imposition on the Fund of causing them to pay The Times' costs and fees for this

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV additional discovery.

Now, I recognize that there's some irony in this because this request would extend the proceedings further. And as you know, we at the time said historically, in trying to move in the other direction, to wrap this up. That irony hasn't been lost on me or my client.

And to be sure with this delay The Times is going to have to continue to make the ongoing withdrawal liability payments, and that's prejudicial.

But we think in light of the wrongful practices here and in order to have a full and complete record and to mitigate our prejudice that has and would continue to result from a failure to have this opportunity to properly prepare for and use these responsive documents, this is the fairest way to proceed. And that we should not have to pay for these extra efforts caused by the very, very late arrival of what our relevant and helpful ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV document and documents that should have been produced are.

ARBITRATOR IRVINGS: Just so I understand before you respond.

What is your request regarding today?

MR. MILLER: So obviously we thought about that. So we have three witnesses scheduled for today. The order was Mr. Urbank and then Dr. Kra, my cross of Dr. Kra, and then Mr. Lewis from Weiser. Let's take the easy case.

I don't think there's any reason we should hold up the cross-examination of Dr. Kra, to be sure. And as I said, there's some meeting minutes that is supportive of our theory of the Segal blend. I would like to reserve the opportunity, although I don't think we'll use it, to have him come back, but I think we should proceed.

It makes sense to proceed with Dr. Kra. He's really independent of this

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV additional request.

2.4

With Mr. Lewis, our view was that assuming he's here and we're all here, while we would reserve the right to recall him, we're ready to proceed to examine him. We'll put aside an examination of him respecting a trustee minutes of meetings obviously he was at until we've got the whole package of relevant documents so we don't do it piecemeal. But we think it makes sense to nonetheless proceed with him.

Mr. Urbank was the toughest of the three as it relates to what we're requesting. And we think on bounds that, notwithstanding his being here, that so many of these documents are related to his testimony. Indeed, you may recall, Mr. Arbitrator, he's the one who often takes the minutes of the meetings and does the initial draft of minutes.

So I think as to him, all things being equal, it would be prejudicial to The Times and kind of half-hearted to Page 765

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV have a cross-examination of him now, knowing that for certainty we'd want to both redepose him on certain documents, so we can prepare in advance what he would have to say as it relates to testimony, and then hearing testimony.

 So that's how we align the witnesses.

ARBITRATOR IRVINGS: Okay. MR. RICHMAN: I'm just going to make some initial comments. Obviously, this is an extraordinary surprise to us.

My first reaction, I think the best analogy here, this is a desperate cry for help from a drowning person and nothing more.

This idea that there is extraordinary evidence in the meeting minutes is ridiculous.

We have had a lot of evidence, both people testifying as well as a plethora of documents, that have talked about contribution rate, the difference between

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV contribution rate and contribution base unit.

Ms. Egan, Mr. Urbank both testified about that.

There are lots of other documents already admitted into evidence that talk about consideration rate, and to say that, whoa, all the sudden we have found the Holy Grail is ridiculous.

That's not any new evidence. It's not even evidence at all.

Now, Mr. Miller has given us two examples when he opened his -- I was going to say plea, but -- presentation. He was talking about what appeared to be many more than two examples.

We, obviously, would like the opportunity to know what these examples are and to address them, because other than the two that have been pointed out, we don't know about them.

We think that we produced documents appropriately. It is absolutely the case, given the tumult at the Fund with ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV respect to the termination of the in-house folks and the changes of trustees that one can easily see from year to year. And the changes in lawyers, it's been difficult to collect documents.

But we've done everything appropriately with respect to producing documents. We actually offered in our response to The Times' last motion that all of the minutes be put into evidence. And we're happy to go back and ask again for anything that appears to be missing. We do know that there are missing minutes, as you know, that we have wrote to you earlier this week.

With respect to the other requests for relief, I think it's not a surprise given my response or given the request that they are completely and totally out of bounds. We're happy to respond to them in writing if, Mr. Arbitrator, you think that's even necessary. We're certainly hoping that it isn't necessary

Page 768 Page 769 1 1 ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV 2 2 unfounded, but if, Mr. Arbitrator, you because they're, quite frankly, off the 3 3 wall think that we need to respond, we 4 4 obviously will respond. And -- but we are certainly willing 5 5 to take all the minutes, put them into In terms of today's events, you 6 6 evidence. That was our proposal. That's know, without having a written motion and 7 7 really some real argument about why this fine 8 8 is startling new evidence, I do think we If The Times has good reason to 9 9 should go forward with all three of the take other depositions after looking at 10 10 this -- after pointing to this new witnesses. And, you know, obviously 11 11 evidence, in quotes, you know, that is that's not going to be my call, right. 12 12 fine. But contrary to The Times' And I got that. 13 13 approach, if we're going to open up a I will say that we are told 14 14 Dr. Kra -- oh, he's here. whole discussion about evidence, it's 15 15 already in evidence. It's not The Times MR. MILLER: He's here. 16 16 that should be compensated here, it is MR. And, quite frankly, And you are entitled to make an 8 8 we think Mr. Urbank ought to testify too, assessment as to whether you want to do. 9 9 but again that's your call. A, get certainly the exhibits, the 10 10 documents you want. I would like a MR. MILLER: May I respond? 11 ARBITRATOR IRVINGS: No. 11 listing of what it is. 12 12 MR. MILLER: Okay. MR. MILLER: Yes. 13 13 ARBITRATOR IRVINGS: Without ARBITRATOR IRVINGS: And if 14 14 attributing blame, culpability and there are other points in the minutes 15 15 the rest, my approach obviously that you feel trigger requests for 16 16 throughout this whole proceeding documents, highlight those to me and 17 17 while handling a plethora of motions to Ron. 18 18 is that my role is to get in evidence Clearly Dr. Kra, there's no reason 19 19 as much as is relevant, necessary and not to take him. Largely, he wasn't part 20 20 expeditiously as possible. I of the meetings. 21 21 consider that my obligation. MR. MILLER: We agree. 22 I'm concerned about some of the 22 ARBITRATOR IRVINGS: Mr. Urbank, 23 23 things in the minutes -- again, without I think it's not appropriate to take 24 24 him until you get the additional attributing culpability or the rest. 25 25 Clearly, while the issue of the stuff, at least. At the very least,

MILLER: Yes. As I ARBITRATOR IRVINGS: Right. 9 9 MR. RICHMAN: And so if we are indicated, we can certainly start and 10 10 we think it would be useful given now going to go back and do 11 11 that everybody is here to have an discovery, and Mr. Urbank may get 12 12 initial examination of him, but we deposed, that we want the opportunity 13 13 would reserve the right as a to talk to him about the new things 14 14 consequence of the documents we have that he is going to be deposed by, if 15 15 and will be receiving to recall him. he is deposed and he is going to 16 16 ARBITRATOR IRVINGS: You testify about, if he's going to 17 17 certainly reserve the right to testify. And the same for Mr. Lewis. 18 18 request to recall him. MR. MILLER: I think Ron's 19 19 MR. MILLER: Right. request is fair as it relates to a 20 MR. RICHMAN: And if he is 20 deposition. And we would like to 21 21 going to be recalled, and certainly depose him before we put him back on 22 22 Urbank, it sounds like will be the stand, because we're trying to 23 23 recalled, we think that the freeze sort of replicate where we would have 2.4 24 ought to melt. ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV more on the particulars of the question.

Assume you've got a pension plan that primarily owns risk-based assets and an actuary is predicting the anticipated rate of return for that pension plan pool of assets.

If that pension plan pool of assets is primarily invested in risk-based investments, is the use of a risk-free rate or near risk-free rate an unbiased prediction of the anticipated rate of return?

Anticipated rate of return will be A a relatively bell-shaped curve.

And if you are evaluating the 50th percentile, the 50th percentile will be higher than the risk-free rate.

However, if you are looking at it in terms of value to the holder, valuing it at the risk-free rate would reduce it to the market price.

O Now I want to switch for a moment from the concept of the actuary bias to the concept of best estimates, because in your

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV direct testimony you were questioned by Mr. Richman about the concept of best estimate and best estimate range.

Do you remember that testimony?

I believe -- I don't remember the details of my testimony, but I would recognize that those concepts could have been asked. I have not seen the transcript from a few weeks ago.

Okay.

Assume, again, that a multiemployer pension plan is invested primarily in risk-based assets.

Do you believe that use of a risk-free rate or near risk-free rate would represent the actuary's best estimate of the anticipated rate of return for this pension plan's asset pool?

The question is if you are looking at the returns on the asset pool or the ability of the asset pool to cover the liabilities of a liability stream --

And let me stop you --

-- and the ASOPs make it very clear A

Page 802

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV that in picking the best estimate or the best estimate range for a particular situation, you have to look at the purpose of the measure that is explicit in the ASOP.

So absent the purpose of the measure for which the answer may be different depending on purpose of measure, I can't answer the question.

Okay. So I'm going to unpack that answer a little bit and ask you a particular question as it relates to a particular portion of it.

If the actuary's task is in fact to look at and to predict the anticipated returns on that asset pool and that is the task, do you believe that the risk-free rate or near risk-free rate would represent the best estimate of the anticipated rate of return for that asset pool, if the asset pool was invested primarily in risk-based --

The actuary would end up with a spectrum of returns with probabilities under ASOP 27. The best estimate is a range between generally the 25th and 75th

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV percentiles as the ASOP was constituted at the time of this particular measure.

And so if you were looking at solely expected return on assets for purposes of projecting the assets, you would have a range of the 25th to 75th percentiles on the return of those assets. And that is what the ASOP says.

I know but that's not the question I wanted you to answer.

I wanted you to answer a simple question.

If you have a -- if a pension plan has a pool of assets and they are primarily invested in equities, would the risk-free or near risk-free rate represent the best estimate of the anticipated future return for that pool of assets?

A future return on a future pool of assets would be a range of returns depending on -- it is a probability of different returns. You could calculate the 50th percentile, the mean or the median that will differ from the risk-free rate.

Page 804 Page 805 1 1 ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV 2 2 However, the best estimate is a I heard a pause, so I answered the 3 3 range which covers a range of returns, and question when I heard the pause. - Q Putting outliers aside, of any multiemployer plan, correct?
 - A Of any multiemployer plan.
- Q And I take it that's because you believe it's appropriate to avoid a transfer of risk from the withdrawing employer to other contributing employers to, in these circumstances, hypothesize for withdrawal liability calculation purposes a different pool of assets that is comprised of risk-free or near risk-free assets, correct?
- A I don't follow the question. There are too many moving parts in that question, so let's break it up.

Q Okay.

So am I right that under your theory, it's appropriate to use a risk-free rate or near risk-free rate to calculate withdrawal liability because there is a prospect -- depending on the rate that's used -- of transferring risk from withdrawing employers to other contributing employers, correct?

A If you use a rate any higher than

Page 809

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV the risk-free rate, the withdrawing employer is transferring risk which has value, negative value, so to speak, to the ongoing employers, and essentially the ongoing employers are subsidizing the withdrawing employer to the extent of the risk transfer.

Q That's my understanding of your opinion.

And so in order to avoid this transfer of risk from the withdrawing employer to the other contributing employers, under your approach, you essentially hypothesize for withdrawal liability calculation purposes a different pool of assets comprised of risk-free or near risk-free assets to determine the discount rate as opposed to the actual plan portfolio, whatever that might be.

A What I would do is I would not look at the actual portfolio. I would look at the liability stream. And "a liability is a liability, is a liability, is a liability to quote that poet about roses (ph.), and say that the liability is

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV independent of the opposing assets.

A liability is what it is and the assets are what they are. And one is used to help pay the other, but would almost be to say that if the bank I take my mortgage from, if I borrow money as a home equity loan and I go and invest it in high-risk equities, the bank should mark down the loan as being a lower liability because there's a higher expected return on the cash flow payments.

- Q So your approach in effect is based on the anticipated experience of the plan in connection with not the plan's actual invested assets, but a different pool of assets, risk-free assets. Isn't that right?
- A It's valuing the liabilities based on a portfolio of bonds that would match the liability stream of the benefit payments.
- Q Regardless of the actual assets that the particular pension plan may be invested in, correct?
 - A Correct.
 - Q Let's turn back to the topic of ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV best estimate and best estimate ranges.

Dr. Kra, I think you testified in your direct examination about a best estimate discount rate for valuing liabilities needing to fall within a best estimate range in order to be consistent with actuarial practice.

Do you remember that?

A Yes.

Q And is it your view that under standard actuarial practice an actuarial best estimate, for example, future investment returns of a portfolio, necessarily refers to an estimated range?

A The actuarial standard of practice that was in effect in May of 2009 described it as a range in which it was more like -- the narrowest range that it was more likely than not. And the actuarial practice at that time was a 50 percent spread in the probability distribution generally viewed as the 25th to 75th percentiles.

Q But, of course, in picking a discount rate for valuing liabilities, one

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV has to and as part of that calculation come up with a single number or a single rate for that purpose, right?

A Yes.

Q And is it your testimony that as long as the rate that is chosen falls within the best estimate range, as you believe that shall be defined, such a number would represent the best estimate?

A As the actuarial standard of practice. It's not what I believe, it's what the ASOP said. The ASOP said that it was the narrowest range more likely than not, which the practice at that time was 25th to 75th percentile. It's not my view, it's the standard of practice as applied by actuaries in the United States in 2009.

Q But just to clarify that, this is your view of what general actuarial practice was at the time?

A That's my understanding of it.

I was one of the co-authors of the implementation guide published by the

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV American Academy of Actuaries on the very issue.

Q Let me ask you this: How does an actuary go about choosing, in your judgment, particularly during the relevant time here in which this withdrawal liability calculation had to be made, a single number within the best estimate range in order to actually make the liability present value calculation?

A There are a number of factors.

Number one, you have to look at the purpose as ASOP 27 states, you must look at the purpose of the measure. ASOP 27 says there are a number of different approaches that can be taken. ASOP 27 gives a cash flow matching approach which comes up with a near risk-free rate. The bond approach as one approach. It also gives a building-block approach as another alternative approach.

There are a number of approaches that acknowledges that there are multiple approaches that actuaries can take based on rage o

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV their best judgment, and it lists a few of them and specifies that the actuary must look at the purpose of the measure in deciding how to do it.

Q It was my understanding based on your earlier testimony that those approaches that you've identified, the building-block approach and the cash flow approach, those were approaches to come up with the range.

I asked you a different question which is how does one go about picking the number within the best estimate range?

A Can we look at the ASOP because I don't believe that's what I -- I didn't say that's how you pick the range. I believe that's also how -- it was helping in getting the number. That's another way of getting the number that many actuaries use the cash flow matching to come up with their number.

O Got it.

And so it's your judgment, just to clarify the record, that use of the building-block approach or use of the cash flow method approach would be approaches

Page 815

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV that are designed not merely to get you to a range, but to get you to a particular rate within a best estimate range?

A I believe that those approaches were used by many actuaries to get a particular rate.

The range would be using some type of stochastic model which would give a probability distribution which would help set the outer bounds for the range; whereas, the cash flow would give you a particular number within a range.

Q In your expert report and I believe in your direct testimony consistent with your expert report, you characterized 3.5 percent to 7 percent as a reasonable range of discount rates for the valuation of unfunded vested benefits in connection with this case for withdrawal liability purposes; is that correct?

A I think we should look at the report. I believe I identified that as the range of interest rates or bond rates that could have been selected at that time

Page 816 Page 817 1 1 ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV 2 2 because of different benchmarks that could would be good defense. 3 3 So any number within that range have been observed 4 4 And I'd have to look at the wording would not be unreasonable? 5 5 A I would have difficulty challenging again in my report. 6 anything in that range as being 6 Q No. I think you properly 7 7 characterized your report. And let me unreasonable. 8 8 expand on that a little bit. Seven percent would be a discount 9 9 Am I right that your opinion both rate that is beyond reasonable challenge, in 10 10 in your report and in your testimony was your judgment? 11 11 that at the time the withdrawal liability What I was saying is that if the 12 12 calculation in this case had to be made, the actuary picked anything in that range, I 13 13 range for risk-free to near risk-free rates would have difficulty challenging. It may 14 14 went from as low as 3.5 to 7 percent? not be the one I would have picked within 15 15 Α I believe that's what I said. that range, but I would have difficulty 16 16 And therefore, I assume, you would challenging it as being unreasonable. 17 17 Using actuarial rules of thumb or agree and it is your opinion that any number 18 18 other accepted mathematical methods to within that range of 3.5 percent to 19 19 7 percent would have been a reasonable estimate, can you estimate what the monetary 20 discount rate that the actuary could have 20 difference is for The Times' withdrawal 21 21 liability between using a 7 percent discount used to compute the withdrawal liability in 22 22 this case, right? rate versus a 3.5 percent discount rate to 23 23 value the liability? Α Yes. Remember that when you are looking at a difference of withdrawal liability, you are looking at leveraged numbers.

So, for example, if the assets of a fund were a hundred million and the change in the discount rate moved the liability from being 101 million to being 105 million. a 4 percent difference, it would be a quintupling of a withdrawal liability.

So when you have leveraging because of the assets, you get a very disproportionate effect on withdrawal liability in the calculation.

So a liability of 105 million versus a liability of 101 million is a 4 percent differential. Yet the difference in withdrawal liability would be 5 million versus 1 million, a 5-to-1 ratio.

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV

So looking at the difference in the withdrawal liability or ratio is not really a valid measure because of this leveraging effect.

Let's move to a different subject, the implications of the actuary in this Fund using a 7.5 percent investment return assumption.

Doctor, I want you to assume for purposes of these questions that an actuary's best estimate is that a Pension Fund's actual assets will return on average 7.5 percent annually.

If the actuary nonetheless discounts the unfunded vested benefits for withdrawal liability purposes using the lower rate and the 7.5 percent best estimate return is in fact realized, isn't it true that the withdrawing employer will have overfunded its allocable share of the benefits?

If the Fund was invested within an expected return of 7 and a half percent and there were no risks involved and the Fund ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV earned 7 and a half percent, and you valued the liabilities at 6, the withdrawing employer would have paid extra.

On the other hand, if that return came because the risk was borne and it was just serendipitously -- or however the word is -- was achieved, then the ongoing employers bore risk, they took risk, they won the bet.

Q I didn't ask about who was bearing this.

I asked essentially a fairly simple math question.

If the best estimate of future expected returns is 7.5 percent annually and that 7.5 percent best estimate is realized, and the actuary nonetheless discounts unfunded vested benefits for withdrawal purposes using the lower rate, it will be true that the withdrawing employer would have overfunded its allocable share of its benefits; yes or no?

A No. It will have funded its allocable. The ongoing employers then went Page 823

ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV to Atlantic City and gambled with the money and won the bet.

So it's that they took risk with the money they received, they won the bet.

Had they lost the bet, they would have made it up.

So they did not overfund. They paid the right number, the withdrawing employer. It's just that the ongoing employers took risk with that money and won the bet.

However, if you simply focused on actual results over time and then looked back, isn't it true that in retrospect if the Fund returned 7.5 and you determined the liabilities and thus the withdrawal liability payments at less than 7.5, the employer in retrospect, the withdrawing employer in retrospect will be paying more than its allocable share of the benefits?

The withdrawing employer will have paid more than would have been necessary to cover those benefits given the actual return which could have come from even buying the Page 825 Page 824 1 1 ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV 2 2 lottery ticket. So if they bought a lottery They have that ability. And that's why we made that notation. Q Let me take you to Exhibit 45. A Okay. Q So this was a trustees meeting? A Yes. Q Okay. And you see on Page Bates Number 1250, there is a says that you "reviewed the final results of the payroll audit of the City & Suburban Delivery Systems, Inc." Do you see that? A Yes, I do. Q And did you actually do that with the trustees? A I don't know if we did it with the trustees or we did it with Fund counsel and Fund director. Q Well, Exhibit 45 is a minutes of a meeting of the trustees, if you turn to the front page.

So materiality was probably a million dollars. Q A million dollars meaning plus or minus of the results of your audit? A Yes. Q And the process of conducting the annual Fund audit, is it fair to say that you would take a sampling of contributing employers and review their remittance reports as part of that audit? A Yes. Q Would a sampling be three or four employers in a particular year or higher or lower than that? A With this Fund it was usually, since there was a smaller group of very large contributors we usually looked at the same employers each year. Q And was The New York Times one of those employers you reviewed every year in connection with the Fund audit? A Yes. Q And is it fair to say you are

BY MR. EATON: Q Can you describe what you mean by "fairly presented"? A That is an audit standard generally accepted in the United States, presents fairly. No material differences. A reader would not come to a different conclusion if the financial statements were presented differently. Q Okay. So is materiality, is that a threshold? A Materiality is a component of the audit, yes. Q And so for an audit for a fund of this size when I say fund, I mean the NMDU Pension Fund what is material for a fund of this size in the annual audit	2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23	ARBITRATION - VOLUME IV assets, total assets. We just looked at the results of each period's test to see the results. Q And the information you had from The New York Times was the wages and 8 percent; is that right? A Yes. Q Can you describe the process that you went through in conducting the payroll audit of The New York Times? A I don't recall the specific engagement; however, we would have randomly selected a period of time, couple weeks during the period, randomly selected individuals during that period and reviewed their payroll that was paid to them, and recalculated the contribution to see if it matched what was being paid to the Fund. Q And did the information from the Fund database play any part in a payroll	2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23	A We were comparing from one to the other. So the Fund records ultimately were what was being tested to. So, yes. Q So for a payroll audit of a contributing employer let's talk about The New York Times in particular. So for a payroll audit of The New York Times, you would at some point compare The Times' data and payroll information with that information that the Fund had received; is that right? A Yes. MR. Hayes - Direct TERRY HAYES, recalled as a witness, having previously been duly sworn, was further examined and testified as follows: DIRECT EXAMINATION BY MR. MILLER: Q. Mr. Hayes, welcome back. You testified in these proceedings back in February, and we've called you back to testify specifically about the subject of what occurred at meetings of the board of trustees and to ask you about minutes from those meetings and various exhibits to those minutes. Those are the only matters we'll be asking you about today. I'd like to start though by asking you to refresh our respective memories about certain aspects of your February testimony to lay the foundation for the new questioning. MR. RICHMAN: Do we really need to do this? MR. MILLER: It's just a couple of I think useful foundational questions, and I do think it will make	Hayes - Direct the documents go more quickly. Q. Have you recently reviewed your February testimony? A. Yes, I have. Q. And what was your testimony about your understanding between 2008 and the time that the Fund assessed partial withdrawal liability in September, 2013 about the relevant measure for the 70 percent decline test for partial withdrawal liability? A. Yes, during that period of time the measurement was a percentage of wages. Q. Okay, alright, with those preliminaries, the documents we'll discuss this morning are contained in the yellow binder, so why don't you open that now. Let me turn your attention initially to Exhibit 125. And Mr. Hayes, can you briefly summarize and identify these materials? A. The first page is the agenda that lists the items that are going to be discussed at the meeting. The page after

Page 970 Page 969 1 1 Hayes - Direct Hayes - Direct 2 2 Q. And at the top of page 5 there is Q. And so in connection with the 3 3 a bullet point that talks about Pension references to a 2 percent and a 1 percent 4 4 Fund diversion of two percent being reduced and a 1.5 percent on page 5, what are those 5 5 to one percent. Do you see that? percentages of? 6 6 A. Yes, I do. A. Those are percentages of wages. 7 7 Q. And there is a similar reference Q. During your time on the board of 8 8 trustees, did the subject of pension to diversion in a bullet that's right under 9 9 this little redacted box. Do you see that contribution diversions frequently come up? 10 10 as well? A. Yes. 11 11 A. Yes, I do. O. And when the issue of diversions 12 12 Q. And then on the next page, page were discussed, how were the diversion 13 13 6, there is also mention of diversion in amounts typically expressed? 14 14 paragraph four as part of a trustee motion. A. The diversion amounts were 15 15 Do you see that? typically expressed in dollars and wages. 16 A. Yes, I do. 16 Q. Let me draw your attention back 17 17 Q. What is your understanding of the to page 5 of the minutes, and there is a 18 18 Pension Fund diversion? bullet right about the middle of the page 19 19 A. The Pension Fund diversion that begins, if the sixers' contributions, 20 20 occurred before I joined the trustee board, do you see that? 21 21 but it was the diversion of up to two A. Yes, I do. 22 percent of the wages associated with the 22 O. And you see at the end of, or the 23 23 Pension Fund contribution that was second half of that sentence in the bullet 24 2.4 available for the union to divert to the point, it talks about guaranties to the 25 25 Welfare Fund through a possible increase in Welfare Fund. Page 971 Page 972 1 1 Hayes - Direct Hayes - Direct 2 2 the employees' shift contribution, do you the minutes, that's Fund number 3094, and 3 3 see that? toward the middle of the page there is a 4 4 discussion that begins under the heading A. Yes, I do. 5 5 Q. So that does mention shift Consultants' Report, do you see that? 6 6 contributions. What is that a reference A. Yes, I do. 7 7 Q. And the consultants in this to? 8 8 A. That is a reference to the regard would be whom? 9 9 employees' per shift contribution to the A. That would be Mr. Urbank and 10 10 Welfare Fund. Ms. Egan. 11 11 Q. Alright, let's turn our attention Q. Let me draw your attention 12 12 now to Exhibit 127. And those are agenda specifically to a sentence just about in 13 13 meeting materials for a December 19, 2007 the middle of that paragraph. It begins 14 meeting. 14 with the word contributions, contributions 15 15 for the year beginning. Why don't you read A. Yes, I see that. 16 16 Q. Okay. And let's begin drawing that sentence to yourself. 17 17 your attention to page 1 and the discussion A. Yes, sir. 18 18 of who was present. Q. And there is a reference in that 19 19 A. I see that. sentence to projected contributions, quote, 20 Q. And did you attend this meeting? 20 reflecting the contribution reallocation to 21 21 A. Again, I don't have a specific the Welfare Fund being reduced from 2 22 percent to 1.5 percent, do you see that? 22 recollection, but the minutes state I was 23 23 there so there's no reason for me to think A. Yes, I do. 24 24 I wasn't. O. And is that a continuation of the 25 Q. And now let's turn to page 2 of 25 discussion on diversion and reallocation

Do you recall attending trustee meetings in which there were descriptions of MR. RICHMAN: Objection. THE ARBITRATOR: He can finish this. Were there descriptions and what were they. MR. MILLER: Yes, that's right. Q. Were descriptions of the contributions discussed at trustee meetings? A. Yes. Q. And what were they? A. It was discussed as contributions being a percentage of wages. Q. And that terminology that was discussed at these meetings, contributions being a percentage of wages, was that	2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23	Hayes - Direct A. It was consistent. Q. Did use of this terminology influence your understanding of the contribution formula? MR. RICHMAN: Objection. THE ARBITRATOR: You're arguing now. Q. Alright, let's turn to Exhibit 131. And again, I draw your attention to the first page of the minutes and its discussion of what trustees were present, and why don't you advise as to whether you attended this meeting. A. Again, I have no specific recollection. The minutes said I was here. I don't doubt that I was there. Q. Alright, let's turn your attention to page 6 of the minutes, and the discussion on that page under the heading Segal Company Report. A. Yes, I see that. Q. And you'll notice that part way

Luncheon adjournment: 1:20 p.m.) Luncheon adjournment: 1:20 p.m.)	Egan - Cross AFTERNOON SESSION (Time noted: 2:15 p.m.) ROSANA EGAN, recalled as a witness, having previously been duly sworn, was further examined and testified as follows: CONTINUED CROSS-EXAMINATION BY MR. MILLER: Q. Good afternoon, Ms. Egan. I'm going to be asking you a variety of questions that relate to the documents that you'll find in that yellow binder. I'm going to be splitting the questions into two categories. One category is questions that relate frankly to the second issue in the case, the Segal blend, and the other sets of questions will relate to the contribution base unit issue. And that means that we will not be going in chronological order in regard to the documents. But I think this will make the process easier to understand and we'll get through it more quickly.
25	Let me ask you a couple of foundational questions before we get into the documents. During your time as actuary for the NMDU Fund, you selected a 7.5 percent rate as the investment return assumption for the Fund, correct? A. For a portion of the time. I'm not sure if it's the whole time as the actuary. I don't remember going back to day one. Q. But certainly in the more recent years you had selected a 7.5 rate as the investment return assumption, correct? A. Yes. Q. And you also used the 7.5 percent rate as the discount rate to value the plan's liabilities for funding purposes, correct? A. Yes. Q. And once you set a discount rate and an investment return assumption, do you review the continued use of that particular selected rate annually or with some frequency? A. Yes. Q. Do you in fact review it	Egan - Cross annually? A. Yes. Q. And generally when you go about setting an investment return assumption for a multi-employer plan, do you review the multi-employer plan's investment policy statement and take account of how the assets are targeted to be invested? A. We would use as part of the process what their target asset allocation would be. Q. So the answer to my question is yes in part, and as part of the process you would take account of how the assets are targeted to be invested, correct? A. Yes. Q. Okay, and specifically in the case of the NMDU Fund in setting the 7.5 percent assumption for future investment returns, did you examine the NMDU Fund's investment policy statement? A. I don't remember off the top of my head if I looked at the policy statement.

And in connection with that work, that annual projection funded percentage, you used 7.5 percent as the discount rate to value the plan's liabilities, correct? A. Yes. Q. Does the Pension Protection Act require an actuary to use a particular discount rate to value vested benefits for purposes of zone certification determination? A. They require you to use reasonable assumptions. Q. And you chose consistent with that requirement a 7.5 rate, correct, the funding assumption? You chose a 7.5 percent rate? Yes or no. A. Yes. Q. Now I'd like you to turn to what's labelled Exhibit C to these minutes,	2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23	Egan - Cross the NMDU Fund based on a variety of different objectives, right? A. Yes. Q. And did you prepare this chart? A. Most probably. Q. You don't have any reason to believe you did not prepare this chart? A. No. Q. And you'll notice on the far right columns there are enumerated funded percentages and then on the far left column there is an identification of the different purposes for which the funded percentage is derived, do you see that? A. Yes. Q. Okay. And then the footnotes, am I right, explain in more detail what each of these purposes are, is that right? A. Yes. Q. So for example to take the first horizontal line which begins zone certification, the funded percentage for

They can argue whatever they want, we're not waiving privilege. MR. MILLER: It mischaracterizes your order, because the fact is that we asked about contribution base units. Your order related to the question of the contribution rate. MR. RICHMAN: It never asked about contribution rates. MR. MILLER: And obviously these minutes address contribution base units. I think your opinion was clear that notwithstanding the other sets of minutes, these minutes were clearly relevant and should have been provided. I take the position that as	2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23	Egan - Cross privilege that extends to the actuary in connection with decisions about legal advice to give to the trustees, the preparation of this witness for testimony falls outside of that scope. And again beyond that point, I don't think it holds up in connection with the issue that we're trying to make factual here. MR. RICHMAN: I've been through lots of it these arbitrations, and I'm happy to brief this issue. I have never heard of anyone asserting that there is no privilege between a witness service provider and the counsel representing the Fund, not only in giving advice to Fund trustees, but in preparation for an arbitration. MR. MILLER: The only other thing I'd add is at the time she gave her testimony and she was prepared for

And if an employee worked 90 shifts, that employee would not get a year of pension credit, correct? A. Under that scenario, yes. Q. Right. And under the mechanic that you employed, your mechanic did not distinguish between employees who did not earn sufficient shifts to obtain a year of pension accrual, correct? A. Repeat the question. Shift is not information I need. I ask them for the pension credits that a participant has. I don't need to use shifts because they give me the pension credits that a participant has. I don't need to calculate that the person had 900 shifts so they didn't earn the pension credit. They give me the pension credit. I don't need the shift information. They're doing that calculation. Q. But on occasion you project future liabilities and future accruals, correct? A. Yes. Q. And in connection with the projection of future accruals, you don't rely on past accruals, do you? A.
